NAZI INFANTRY CROSSES DON RIVER NEAR VORONEZH

German Division of More Than 15,000 Men Supported by 100 Tanks

MAIN FORCES HELD

The German High Command Claims Voronezh Has Already Fallen

MOSCOW, July 11—A German infantry division, supported by 100 tanks, has managed to cross the Don River in the neighborhood of Voronezh but the main German forces are still being held on the west bank, it was declared today.

(A German infantry division numbers between 15,000 and 20,000 men. With tanks and planes preceding them and a heavy German artillery barrage for siege guns on the western—or higher—bank of the Don covering their advance, it was considered likely that the Germans had penetrated into some sections of Voronezh.)

(The German High Command claimed that Voronezh already was in German hands, but there was no Soviet confirmation of this claim.)

These forces, estimated at 1,000,000 men, at least 1,000 tanks and an equal number of planes, are being severely hammered and prevented from sending reinforcements across the vital waterway, it was stated.

Savage and Soviet flank attacks northward of the Kursk-Voronezh wedge have forced the enemy back on the offensive.

It was conceded earlier that Nazi spearheads were making progress in their triple-thronged offensive pointing toward Rostov, northern gateway to the oil-rich Caucasus.

WPB Is Reserving "Gas" Stations Near War Plants

NEWARK, July 11—The War Production Board has reserved or soon will reserve gasoline stations around virtually every large war production plant in New Jersey for the exclusive use of war workers, a war agency spokesman said today.

The plan will eliminate war plant absences caused by workers' inability to get gasoline, WPB officials believe, and also may permit an increased supply of fuel for other motorists.

Stations reserved for war workers are getting 75 to 90 percent of normal deliveries, as compared with 50 percent deliveries to stations open to the general public, an unofficial check indicated.

The restricted stations, which will carry signs reading "War Workers' Stations," have been selected jointly by the branch of the armed service with contracts at the nearby plant, by the plant management and by a labor committee from the plant.

"The general public should not make any attempt to use these stations," an Army Air Force officer said in discussing the new setup. "Only war workers can buy there. Any other motorist who pulls into line and then argues with the station operator can only make it harder for all concerned."

STORM BLOWS DOWN WIRES

5 POUND, 8 OUNCE BASS LEAPS INTO BOAT ON NESHAMINY; BOYS POUNCE ON PRIZE AFTER LUCKLESS DAY OF FISHING

HULMEVILLE, July 11—"Billy" the large member of the finny tribe in Jackson and "Jackie" McCarthy, who spend most of their free hours in, on, or along the Neshaminy Creek, have a difficult life ahead of them. For every time in the future years—and the times will be frequent—that they commence to tell a certain story—"Remember the day the 5 lb., 8 oz. bass jumped in our boat?"—they're going to be met not only with skepticism but with downright disbelief.

They still thrill to the battle to hold

ARMY, NAVY BOMBERS ARE NEMESIS FOR "SUBS"

Reveal Value of Aircraft in Battle of Atlantic Ocean

KEEP SUBS "UNDER"

(Editor's Note—This is the first of two articles in a series on how American bombers are effectively combating Axis submarines in the Atlantic.)

By John R. Henry
I. N. S. Staff Correspondent
WITH THE ATLANTIC FLEET, A MID-OCEAN BASE—(Delayed)—(INS)—Army and Navy patrol bombers today are a steadily growing nemesis for enemy submarines.

After nearly two weeks of assignment to the Navy air station here and to another base at an eastern coast port, this correspondent is able to reveal to some degree the value of aircraft in the Battle of the Atlantic.

Aloft in fair weather and foul and in several different types of planes, I was permitted to observe both Navy and Army airmen in action. I watched them hunt submarines from their cockpits in the clouds.

The experiences were many and varied for a person whose background as a flier consisted solely of being an uninterested paying customer on a few commercial airliners.

I started with taut nerves while we dived at a submarine—lucklessly, it developed.

I clung tenaciously to the cowl when, in a two-seater machine, we sidestepped toward the briny depths to investigate a strange object in the water.

I crouched in the bombardier's compartment, took my turn in the forward blister during machine gun practice, and got a lesson in the complexities of wind currents over the ocean from the navigator.

Most important, however, were conversations with pilots, navigators, radiomen, bombardiers and gunners and their opinions of the airplane vs. the submarine.

Consensus was that American planes are an increasing menace to enemy undersea craft.

"Make no mistake about it," commented a flight commander seated in his office, clearing his desk before a

Rescue Squad Arrives; But The Boys Had Gone

Two boys seen hanging to a buoy in the Delaware River off Market street, yesterday afternoon, were thought to be in trouble. Someone informed the police, and the Blood Donors Rescue Squad went to the scene.

When the Rescue Squad reached the scene the boys were found to have swum ashore and left.

Here and There in Bucks County Towns

Henry C. Gentner, Jr., former Sellersville Borough Council member and well-known tobacco man, died Sunday in Grand View Hospital, Sellersville, following a long illness. He was 63.

For many years superintendent of the Eisenlohr Brothers cigar factories, Sellersville, and in five nearby communities, Mr. Gentner was head bookkeeper for Sackman Brothers, Telford Clothing manufacturers, at the time of his death. He is survived by his wife, Mabel, a brother and a sister. Services were held Wednesday afternoon from his home, 129 Lawn avenue. Burial was in St. Michael's Lutheran churchyard.

The 20th annual Perkasie Evangelical Assembly, conducted by the East Pennsylvania Conference of the Evangelical Church opened at Perkasie, Monday, when 250 ministerial and lay delegates enrolled.

Rev. Dr. E. E. Stauffer presided at the opening session when the assembly sermon was preached by Rev. Dr. M. L. Haehlen, pastor of College Church, Naperville, Ill. Sessions continued throughout the week.

Following the morning service in the Baptist Church at New Britain, Sunday, a brief business session of the congregation was held and at that time the members decided to extend a call to Edgar T. Chandler, a recent graduate of Crozer Theological Seminary, if he accepts, he will succeed the large member of the finny tribe in the boat, once they realized what it was that nearly scared them to death. They can still feel the cuts which the fins made in the palms of their hands, but it was worth it. And the knowledge that that experience, one in a life-time, is true, will more than make up for difficulty they will have in convincing people of its authenticity.

The two young lads had been fishing all day Wednesday with the usual luck of a few eels and "sunnies." Just before dark they decided to row on the creek, and did not bother with fishing lines. As they continued slowly, the two nearly jumped from the boat when a heavy object landed on the rear seat then bounced to the floor of the craft.

The first thought was that a mallard duck had flown into the craft, and the boys were wide-eyed when they surveyed the large bass. With but a single thought, to keep the prize, the two pounced on it, regardless of sharp fins. They held it hard, then pulled for shore, all the time shouting to anyone within hearing distance of their luck. Fishermen on either shore, having shown patience for hours as they cast their fancy flies and tackle, threw down lines in disgust and called it a day.

A pinocchio game in what is known as the "Cabana" along the bank, was broken up for good, as the men assisted the lads in lifting the prize fish ashore and taking it to be weighed.

Experienced fishermen, with envy not hidden from their eyes, pronounce it a bass among bass for this section; while "Jackie" McCarthy and his parents, brothers and sister, claim it the best fish they ever ate.

21 JUVENILES AND PARENTS ASKED TO REPORT TO POLICE

Round-Up To Be Made In Connection With High School Damage

ONE GIRL ON THE LIST

Windows Broken and Other Damage Done To The Building

Twenty boys and one girl, all juveniles, have been notified to appear at police headquarters Monday night at 7:30 o'clock. The parents have been asked to accompany their children.

The round-up is the result of an epidemic of vandalism at the Bristol high school building which has reached such proportions that it has been decided to take action against those found guilty.

For a period of several years much damage has been done to the school property. Windows have been broken, locks on gates have been smashed and outside spigots have been torn loose. Nearly a hundred windows have been broken recently at the high school building, Wilson avenue and Garfield street.

Tuesday afternoon while a first-aid class was being held in the high school auditorium a stone crashed through one of the windows and dropped to the floor. Another stone smashed a window in one of the class rooms.

On this occasion the school authorities obtained the names of some of the boys said to have been throwing stones at the windows. Repeated warnings have been given but all have failed to have any effect.

The high school building is practically the only school building in the borough which is damaged in this manner.

Law Catches Up With An Escaped Convict

CARVERSVILLE, July 11—A Lynchburg, Va., Negro, Cecil Austin, 28, discovered this week that "the law," which he claimed he could evade, had caught up with him.

Austin, who escaped from a Lynchburg jail some time ago as he was waiting to be taken to a Virginia penitentiary to start a 10-year sentence, was taken in custody on a farm here this week.

Through a tip released by a draft board, police got busy and after checking with Lynchburg authorities, Austin was located on the Carversville farm. He tried to get away from Private Harris of the Pennsylvania Motor Police, the day he was found on the farm, but his last attempt at escape did not work.

Yesterday, Officers S. E. Cox and R. O. Brooks, of the Lynchburg police department, came to Doylestown for Austin, who was taken from the Bucks County Prison to the office of Justice of the Peace W. Carlisle Hobensack, where he was released in the custody of the Virginia officers to be returned to that state.

More Than 350 Ships Sunk By Enemy Action

(By International News Service)

The announced sinkings of four more United Nations cargo vessels today brought to more than 350 the revealed unofficial total of Allied sea losses due to enemy action in the Western Atlantic and Caribbean since January.

At the same time a charge that submarines again had invaded the St. Lawrence River and torpedoed three ships echoed through a startled Canadian Parliament.

The reported St. Lawrence attacks were not included in the new United Nations losses which were accompanied by a total of 13 men killed or missing.

J. S. Roy, independent member of the Canadian House of Commons, made the charge of enemy undersea activity in the St. Lawrence—the first sign of Axis forays there since May 11. The Canadian Government at that time admitted two ships had been sunk in the big river channel.

Roy said he was making his announcement on the basis of information gathered in his home district in Gaspe, Quebec, and asked if the Government was ready to make a statement. Prime Minister W. L. MacKenzie King said that if and when a statement was to be released, it would come from Naval Minister MacDonald.

KEEP WELL TO WIN

Mindful of the soundness of the adage that "an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure," the Institute of Life Insurance has started a campaign to tell Americans how to avoid preventable illness. This war within a war, this battle against preventable disease has as its aim the maintenance of top-notch health and energy on the American home front at a time when every production hour counts, when every hour lost through illness that could have been prevented presents a situation that can impede the conduct of the war.

The situation's real seriousness perhaps can be better realized if it is known that by the end of this year 40,000 physicians and dentists and 35,000 nurses will be serving with the armed forces. This is nearly one-third of America's total medical force. Those who are left to take care of the civilian population will have their hands full and could easily be swamped with the work that one serious epidemic might cause.

Surgeon General Thomas Parvan, Dr. Morris Fishbein, of the American Medical Association; Paul V. McNutt, Federal Security Administrator, and others have been concerned with the potentialities of the problem unless the American people are sufficiently aroused to participate in a nation-wide health crusade.

The crusade consists of nothing more than following five simple health rules: Eat right—three meals a day of milk, butter, eggs, fish, meat, cheese and the other key foods.

Get your rest—remember you cannot catch up on lost sleep.

See your doctor once a year—give him a chance before you get sick.

Keep clean—plenty of baths, fresh air and sunshine.

Play some each day—your mind and body need a change from the daily grind on the job.

These few rules make it easy to keep well. "Just by keeping well you can help win this war," is good advice.

MORE SCORCHED EARTH

Suppose the Germans do force their way through to the Caucasus oil before winter. Will they not find a most thorough scorched earth program awaiting them?

This time it would not be the work of one nation to dismantle and destroy the oil installations so as to make oil production an impossibility for months to come. Even if the Germans got to the wells before the Russians had applied the torch and set off the dynamite, the British would blast the three pipe lines necessary to carry that oil to accessible ports.

Russia in 1940 produced 220,000,000 barrels of oil—approximately one-sixth the output of the United States—and 75 per cent of that came from Baku. So the Baku fields are a rich prize. But if, by late August, say, the Russians have still blocked the road, and the Turkish venture also seems a too involved one, will the Germans suddenly lunge westward and strike once and for all in England?

The Inter-Allied Command in London is thinking of this, and therefore is pounding Western Europe constantly from the air. This summer will produce many surprises. One of the greatest of them will be the autumn action in the west in which the United States will have an even more active role than in 1918.

Random Harvest by JAMES HILTON

CHAPTER FORTY-EIGHT
Out of the unused fifteen they chose two large attic rooms with a view over roof tops northward as far as Hampstead and Highgate, and it was to begin buying the bare necessities of furniture and utensils, searching the Caledonian Market for broken-down chairs that could be repaired and reupholstered, discarded shop fittings usable as bookshelves, an old school desk that showed mahogany under its coating of ink and dirt. Gradually the rooms became a home, and the entire vacant floor beneath encouraged a kinship with roofs and sky rather than with the walls and pavements of the streets.

Towards the end of September, Blampied received a quarterly payment which he chose to devote to a crusading holiday rather than to paying arrears of his borough council rates. Having invited Smith and Paula to join the expedition, he took them for a week into rural Oxfordshire "making trouble wherever we go," as the parson put it, though that was an exaggeration. The question of country footpaths was, he admitted, his King Charles's Head—every man, he added, should have some small matter to which he attaches undue importance, always provided that he realizes the undesired. Realizing it all the time, Blampied would puzzle over ancient maps in bar parlors, inquiring from villagers whether it was still possible to take the diagonal way across the fields from Planter's End to Marsh Hollow, and generally receiving the answer that no one ever did—it was much quicker to go round by the road, and so on. "I reckon you could if you tried, mister, but you'd 'ave a rare time gettin' through them nettles."

A few more pints of beer would perhaps elicit the information that "I remember when I was a kid I used to go to school that way, but 'twouldn't be no help now, it is." Yet those, as the parson emphasized, drinking his beer as copiously as the rest, were the paths their forefathers had trod, the secret short cuts across hill and valley, the ways by which the local man could escape or intercept while the armed stranger tramped along the highroads. All of which failed to carry much weight with the Oxfordshire men of 1919, many of whom, as armed strangers, had tramped the highroads of other countries. They obviously regarded the parson as an oddity, but being country people they knew that men, like trees and unlike suburban houses, were never exactly the same, and this idea of unreasonableness as the pattern of life meant that (as Blampied put it) they didn't think there was anything very odd in anyone being a little odd.

Several times the parson spoke on village greens to small, curious, unenthusiastic audiences, most of whom melted away when he suggested that there and then they should march over the ancient ground, breaking down any barriers that might have been erected during the past century or so; but in one village there was a more active response, due to the fact that the closing of a certain path had been recent and resented. It was then that Blampied showed a certain childlike pugnacity; he clearly derived enormous enjoyment from leading a crowd of perhaps fifty persons, many of them youngsters out for a walk, through Hilltop Farm and up Long Meadow to the gap in the hedge that was now laced with fresh barbed wire. Smith found he could best be useful in preventing the children from destroying crops or tearing their clothes; he thought the whole expedition a trifle silly but pleasingly novel. Actually this particular onslaught had quite an exciting finish; the owner of the property, a certain General Sir Richard Hawkesley Wych-Furlough, suddenly appeared on the scene, backed by a menacing array of servants and gamekeepers. Everything pointed to a battle, but all that finally developed was a long and wordy argument between the General and the parson, culminating in retirement by both sides and a final shout from the General: "What in blazes has this business got to do with you, anyway? You don't live here!"

"And that," as Blampied said afterwards, "from a man who used to be Governor of so many islands he could only visit a few of them once a year—so that any islander might have met his administrative decisions with the same retort—'What's it got to do with you? You don't live here!'"

The notion continued to please him as he added: "I was a missionary on one of those islands—till I quarreled with the bosses. I always quarrel with bosses...."

Gradually Smith and Paula began to piece together Blampied's history. Born of a wealthy family whom he had long ago given up on, he had originally entered the Church as a respectable and sanctioned form of eccentricity for younger sons. Later, even more eccentrically and with a good deal more sincerity, he had served as a missionary in the South Seas until his employers discovered him to be not only heretical, but a bad compiler of reports. After that he had come home to edit a religious magazine, resigning only when plunging circulation led to its bankruptcy.

For a time after that he had dabbled in politics, joining the early Fabians, with whom he never quarreled at all, but from whom he became estranged by a widening gulf of mutual exasperation. "The truth is, Smith," he confessed, "I never could get along with all the Risers-to-Second-That and the On-a-Point-of-Orderers. If I were God, I'd say—Let there be Light. But as I'm not God, I'd rather spend my time plotting for Him in the dark than in holding committee meetings in a man-made blaze of publicity!"

He formed the habit of talking with the two of them for an hour or so most evenings, especially as summer lagged behind and coal began to burn in a million London grates. To roof dwellers it was a rather dirty but strangely comforting transition—the touch of smoke-laden fog drifting up from the river, the smell of smoldering heaps in parks and gardens, the chill that seemed the perfect answer to a fire, as the fire was to the chill. For London, Blampied claimed, was of all cities in the world the most autumnal—its mellow brickwork harmonizing with fallen leaves and October sunsets, just as the etched grays of November composed themselves with the light and shade of Portland stone. There was a charm, a deathless charm, about a city whose inhabitants went about muttering, "The nights are drawing in," as if it were a spell to invoke the vast, sprawling creature-comfort of winter. Indeed no phrase, he once said, better expressed the feeling of curtailed enclosure, of almost stupefying coziness, than blankets London throughout the dark months—a sort of spiritual central heating, warm and sometimes weepy, but not depressing—a Dickensian, never a Proustian fug.

Those were the happy days when Smith began to write. As most real writers do, he wrote because he had something to say, not because of any specific ambition to be a writer. He turned out countless articles and sketches that gave him pleasure only because they contained a germ of what was in his mind; but he was never fully satisfied with them himself and consequently never more than slightly disappointed when editors promptly returned them. He did not grasp that, because he was a person of no importance, nobody wanted to read his opinions at all. Presently, by sheer accident, he wrote something that fitted a formula; it was promptly accepted and—even more important for him at the time—paid for. After he had worked all morning he would often set out in the afternoon with Paul on a planless excursion decided by some chance-met bus; or sometimes they would tramp haphazardly first to the left, then to the right, mile after mile, searching for books or furniture in old, gas-lit shops, and returning late at night through the narrow defiles of the City. They liked the City, the city with a capital C, and especially at dusk, when all the teashops filled with men, a curious democracy within a plutocracy—silk-hatted stockbrokers buying twopenny cups while at the same table two-pounds-a-week clerks drank similar cups and talked of wireless or motor bicycles or their suburban back gardens.

And afterwards, as Paula took Smith's arm on the pavement outside, they would be caught in the human current sweeping along Old Broad Street in a single eastward stream, then crossing Liverpool Street like a flood tide into the vast station delta. He loved to see those people, so purposeful and yet so gentle, so free and yet so disciplined, hurrying towards the little moving boxes that would carry them because they were so unknown to one another, so that a bus shutting all day between Putney and Homerton gave one a mystical curiosity about all the people in Homerton who had never seen Putney, and all the people in Putney for whom Homerton was as strange as—perhaps stranger than—Paris or New York. There was something fantastic, too, in that morning and evening migration, huge in man miles rather than any movement of the hordes of Tamerlane, something that might well be incomprehensible to the urban masses of the future, schooled to garden cities and decentralization. But there could never be such romance as in the pull of steam through the Bishopsgate tunnels, or faces that stared in friendly indifference as trains raced parallel out of Waterloo.

He wrote of such things, and he wrote as he saw—a little naively, as if things had never been seen before—like the line drawings of a child, with something of the same piercing simplicity. It probably helped him, as Blampied said, to have forgotten so much about himself, because in that absence came an awareness far beyond the personal reach—the idea of the past as something to be approached in vision rather than explored in memory. He wrote, too, of the countryside as he had seen it; of the men in the pubs with their red faces shy over mugs of beer—old couples outside their cottages on summer evenings, silent and close, yet in that silence and closeness telling all there is in the world—a peddler unlatching a lonely house—farm workers towards a lathouse—farm workers here and there for no reason at all—scenes after scenes, as a child turns page in a loved picture book, yet behind the apocalyptic wonderment of it all there was something to which talks with Blampied had added shape and quality—the vision of a new England rooted far back in the old, drawing its strength from a thousand years instead of its weaknesses from a hundred.

"Follow that vision," Blampied once said. "Follow it wherever it leads. Think it out. Write it down. I'd say preach it if the word hadn't been debased by so many of my own profession."

"I couldn't preach, anyhow. No more public appearances for me after the last one."

"But preaching doesn't need a pulpit. All it needs is what you have—a faith."

"Is yours the same faith?"

HOLLYWOOD—(INS)—Even now, after many years of a widespread acquaintance with the cosmetic art, there are prevalent many erroneous beliefs about that basic beautifying material, face powder.

Prominent among these is the one which has it that face powders contain ingredients which are harmful to the skin.

In years past one occasionally could find powders which contained injurious substances. But today no cosmetic firms are going to deliver face powders which contain irritating ingredients. If they did, they wouldn't be in business for long. The Pure Food, Drug and Cosmetic Act of the United States government would immediately put a stop to them.

Here's a Cherry "Special"

By Frances Lee Barton

Cherry Upside Down Cake

1 1/2 cups sifted cake flour; 1 1/4 teaspoons double-acting baking powder; 1/4 teaspoon salt; 3/4 sugar; 4 tablespoons butter or other shortening; 1 egg, well beaten; 1/2 cup milk; 1 teaspoon vanilla; 4 tablespoons butter; 1/2 cup sugar; 1 1/2 cups pitted and drained red cherries, fresh or canned.

Sift flour once, measure, add baking powder, salt, and sugar, and sift together three times. Cream butter thoroughly. Add dry ingredients, egg, milk, and vanilla and stir until all flour is dampened; then beat vigorously 1 minute.

Melt 4 tablespoons butter in 8 x

8 1/2 inch pan or 8 inch skillet, over low flame; add sugar and cook and stir until thoroughly mixed.

On this arrange cherries. Turn batter out on contents of pan. Bake in moderate oven (350° F.) 50 minutes, or until done. Loosen cake from sides of pan with knife or spatula. Turn upside down on dish with cherries on top. Garnish with whipped cream, if desired.

Note: For best results, have all ingredients at room temperature

belief is that the regular use of face powder will cause enlarged pores or blackheads. This isn't so. Such complexion flaws are usually the result of too much oil in the skin, together with a failure to remove the exuding surplus of this oil with frequent cleansing.

Many women who suffer from an infectious skin ailment, such as impetigo or acne, immediately place the blame for any rapid spread of their irritation on the use of face powder.

They may be somewhat correct in this assumption, but not in the way they imagine. If they apply their powder with the same puff, day after day, and particularly if the puff is a rather soiled one, they naturally transfer their skin infection from one portion of the face to another. But it is not the powder which is responsible for this re-infection. The fault lies with the puff.

When infectious irritations are apparent on the face, apply your powder with disposable puffs and avoid re-infection. Under any circumstances, see to it that you use only very clean powder puffs. Skin infections can be started by the use of a badly soiled one.

Another face powder superstition is that none of the standard shades of this material are precise enough to exactly complement the individual complexion, and that the woman who wishes such powder shade preciseness must have powder custom-mixed for her, or must mix them herself.

There is no harm whatsoever in following the above fancy, except that it involves some trouble and bother, and generally boosts powder costs to an appreciable degree. The wide range of standard powder shades which are now available everywhere will perfectly complement any complexion tint in the world. Custom-mixed powder is purely a conceit.

Many women are not using the correct shade of powder, frequently because they haven't correctly classified their own natural skin tone, and consequently have failed to match it in powder tone. A good general rule to remember is that powder which is too light or too dark will obviously show as powder on your face. Powder in the right shade, smoothed down as it should be, will not.

Don't go in for faddish powder effects unless you happen to be an extraordinarily exotic type. There are very few women, for instance, whose appearances can be at all flattered by a monotone, unrogued complexion effect, done in unnaturally dark powder.

ON THE SCREENS

GRAND THEATRE

A delightful combination of dancing and music by Eleanor Powell and Tommy Dorsey's orchestra, with comedy by Red Skelton, is on the bill at the Grand Theatre, where the musical comedy, "Ship Ahoy", is showing.

Miss Powell offers five completely new dance routines. In one she actually taps out a Morse code message, to notify her friends that enemy agents are operating. There is little attempt at serious plotting, the whole arrangement being happily dedicated to mirth.

Red Skelton is, as usual, inimitable in his comedy role as the suitor of Miss Powell.

One of the year's most poignant dramas will make its local debut at the Grand Theatre Sunday when "In This Our Life" opens. The film features a brilliant cast with Bette Davis, Olivia de Havilland, Dennis Morgan and George Brent in the leading roles, while Charles Coburn, Frank Craven and Billie Burke make up the talented supporting cast.

BRISTOL THEATRE

"Remember Pearl Harbor," a timely new picture, opened last night at the Bristol Theatre, and proved to be a thrilling and absorbing screen attraction, winning enthusiastic applause from a large first-night audience. It is a stirring tribute to those heroes who defend our far-flung frontiers. Charles Starrett and Donald Curtis appear in "The Royal Mounted Patrol," outdoor action drama at the Bristol.

The portents are that local filmgoers will be in for a jolting experience when "This Gun for Hire" arrives tomorrow at the Bristol.

RITZ THEATRE

A girl who could capture an arsenal, seize government trains, repeatedly rout United States troops—and still look beautiful and find time for love, is worthy of anyone's interest.

Such a girl was "Belle Starr," the famous bandit queen of the Ozarks, who was brought to thrilling life on the screen of the Ritz Theatre last night's Technicolor production which bears her name.

ST. ANN'S LOSES THIRD STRAIGHT GAME, BEING DEFEATED BY THE DIAMOND NINE; FINAL SCORE, 8 TO 7

Failing to hold a 7-0 lead, St. Ann's A. A. lost its third straight game last night, bowing to the Diamond nine, 8-7, on the Saints' field.

St. Ann's scored its seven markers in the first two frames and until the fourth held a 7-0 edge. Diamond scored a run in the fourth, four more in the fifth and then won in the last frame by scoring three runs without a runner being retired.

It was a double from the bat of "Lefty" Goodwin which scored Balon with the winning tally that ended the contest. Previous to Goodwin's two-bagger Balon had scored two runs with a single to centerfield. It was Goodwin's third hit of the night.

Manager Henny Morgan did the pitching for the Diamond team and after the first inning settled down to pitch a beautiful game. From the first frame on, St. Ann's had but one hit, a single by DeLuca in the third. Morgan retired in order the last fourteen batters to face him.

Four hits, two walks, and a pair of errors enabled St. Ann's to count six runs in their first turn with the stick and another in the second on a walk and two errors.

Roe's triple in the fourth led to the first Diamond run while four hits and a hit batsman was responsible for the quartet of markers in the fifth.

In four appearances at the plate, Roe had a double, triple, was hit with a pitched ball and fled out to right field.

FLEETWINGS ARROWS TO PLAY BREWSTER IX

Fresh from an 8-3 victory over the strong Tioga A. C. semi-pro team last Sunday, the Fleetwings' Arrows will resume action again tomorrow afternoon against one of its aircraft associates, the Brewster plant of Hattboro.

The game is to be played at the Arrows' home field, the Turner's Country Club, just below Croydon on State Road, and it is expected to be a closely contested encounter. Though the Brewster team was organized only recently, it is reported to be strong.

The Arrows have been meeting some stiff competition afforded by some of the best teams in the Philadelphia area, including the U. S. Coast Guards of the Navy Yard, Philadelphia, and the Bendix Aviation Club.

And for future tilts they have lined up such teams as Fort Dix, Navy Yard, Receiving Station, U. S. Marines, home-and-home games with Grumman and Republic Aviation teams and tentative return tilts with the Bendix club and the U. S. Coast Guards.

Tuesday, July 14, the Arrows meet their stiffest opposition of the entire season when they buck up against the strong Fort Dix Club in a twilight game on the Turner's field. This game will start at 6:30.

Order Upheld By Bucks County Court

should pay the sum of $914.93 and the further sum of $482.21 or a total of $1,397.14, to milk producers to whom the defendant made underpayments for a certain period.

The Milk Commission revoked the Langhorne dairyman's license from May 1, 1941, to April 30, this year.

President Judge Keller, in his opinion, ruled as follows: "The action of the board in levying these assessments is unsupported by any competent testimony, and its decision was based upon an order which is arbitrary and in the nature of a penalty for failure to comply with the requirements of the Commission rather than upon any supporting facts and therefore, is without any warrant or authority of law."

The Court further ruled "that as to the revocation of the Langhorne defendant's license, we affirm the action of the board as being within its authority and justified in its action."

Part of the Langhorne milk dealer's defense was that he was no longer in business when certain charges were made by the Milk Control Commission.

and "Once Upon the Hillside," group recitation, Rose Marie Cuttone; Bible verses committed to memory, older children; "Jesus calls the children Dear Children" each carrying white, yellow, red and black flags; junior department numbers in charge of Mrs. George Colville; Psalm 91, Sadie Scancelli; Psalm 98, Emma Zanni; "Onward Christian Soldiers," by six boys carrying crosses; "The Prologue of John" given by eight girls; "Faith of Our Fathers" sung by the cast, and "We've a Story to Tell to the Nations"; moving pictures of last year's Vacation Bible School; benediction, the Rev. Francis Panetta.

Mrs. George Colville, who had charge of the junior department during the past few weeks, led the worship exercises and helped the pupils memorize Bible verses. During the three weeks about 20 members of this department memorized a verse each day, beginning with each letter of his or her name. These were displayed on a Victory chart. This was a beautiful poster with the American flag in the center, the girls' names in blue on one side, and the boys' names in red on the other. Those who memorized additional verses had their names marked with stars. For excellent work a small American flag was placed.

Three hymns were committed to memory; also the 91st Psalm, the 98th Psalm; 53rd chapter of Isaiah; and the prologue of St. John.

Miss Betty Beswick assisted at the piano, and taught Old Testament lessons. She also conducted the worship services held each day in the church, with Miss Clavarella at the organ.

Miss Marie Constantini helped with the embroidery; and Mrs. Colville instructed the boys in woodcraft. Many useful things were made by the students.

Miss Clavarella taught the beginners and primary groups, assisted by Miss Anna Petiolillo and Miss Rita Fiorito. An Old Testament lesson was made by the group. They also sewed Bible mottoes on perforated cards. They studied "Jesus' Friends," "Learning How to Pray" and "Our Friends Far Away." Many songs were learned.

One hundred were enrolled, the average attendance being 62. The Rev. Sargis, of Edgington, led the services in the church the third week.

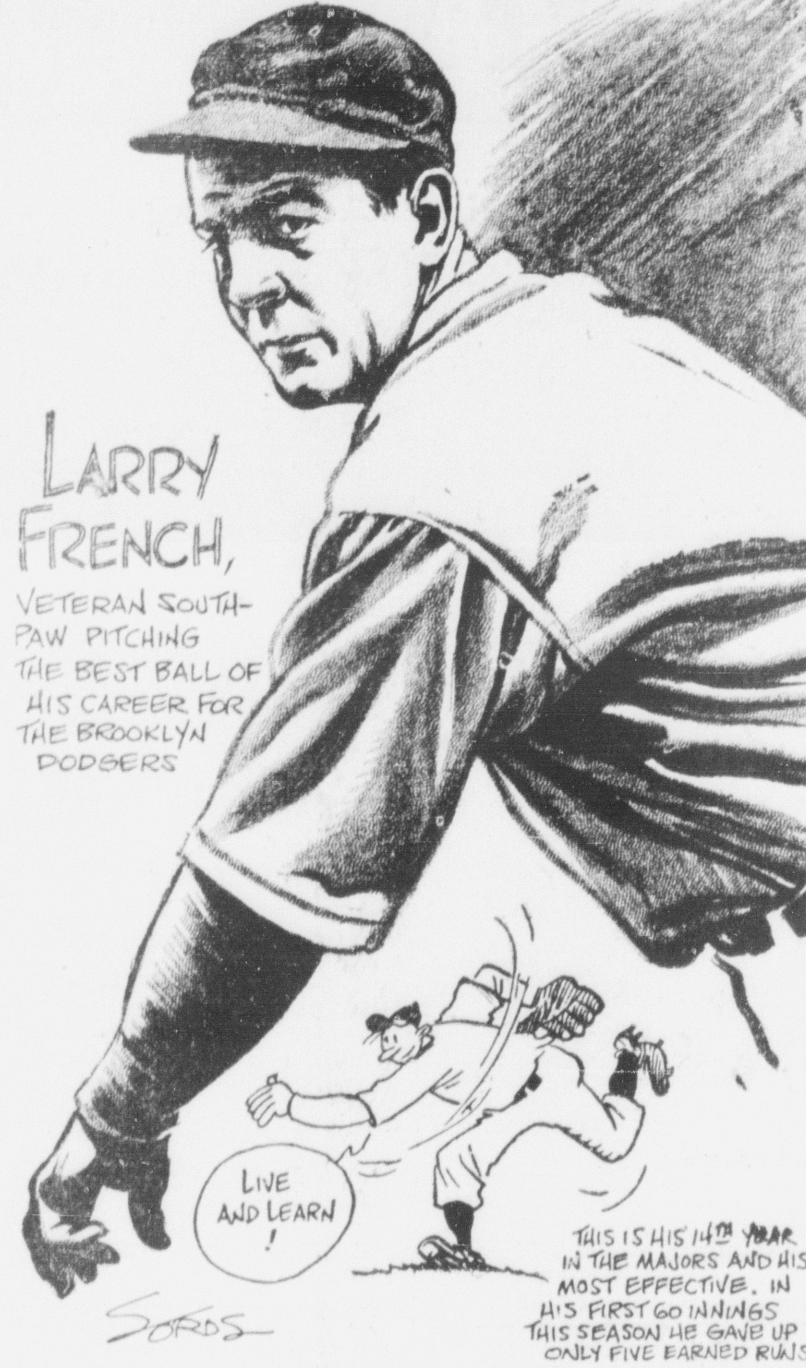

Miss M. McMurray, of the Summer Evangelistic Committee of the Presbyterian Church of the U. S. A., visited the school on Thursday.

He said he waited long enough to make certain the hay was well ignited, then ran to the house to telephone Springtown Fire Company. He aided the firemen in removing items from the barn.
